THE GENUINE
DR. C. McLANE'S

are not recommended as a remedy "for all the ills that flesh is heir to," but in affections of the Liver, and in all Bilious Complaints, Dyspepsia, and Sick Headache, or diseases of that character, they stand without a rival.

ACUE AND FEVER.
 No better cathartic can be used preparatory to, or after taking quinine. As a simple purgative, they are unequalled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.
 The genuine are never sugar coated. Each box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression, McLANE'S LIVER PILLS. Each wrapper bears the signature of C. McLane and Fleming Bros.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by FLEMING BROS., Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

FOR PRESIDENT,
JAMES A. GARFIELD,
Of Ohio.
FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
CHESTER A. ARTHUR,
Of New York.

NEWS OF THE MORNING.

General Grant and family will leave Galena for Colorado early next week.

In the British House of Lords Friday the bill legalizing marriage with a deceased wife's sister was rejected by a vote of 101 to 91.

The passengers of the wrecked steamer Narragansett, of the Stonington line, have decided upon bringing suits against the company to recover damages.

A New York dispatch says: Two hundred and seven deaths have occurred in this city during the past twenty-four hours, the highest mortality in any one day this year. Total deaths for the past week, 1,083. Cholera infantum is very prevalent.

At a meeting of the Committee of the Mansion House Relief Fund Friday it was stated authoritatively that the fund afforded only three weeks' supply, and it is the only charitable organization that the people can look to be saved from famine during the next few months.

In a speech in Shelbyville, Mr. English, the Democratic nominee for Vice President, said he was proud of such a welcome at the former home of Hendricks, a gentleman who without doubt would be an active participant in the councils and administration of the new Democratic government.

The Treasury authorities are in a cave of gloom, because the only original cheap money men—the counterfeiters—are producing in large numbers greenbacks and national bank notes which defy detection. Indeed the sole difference between the bogus and genuine is that the spurious are more artistic, and in many respects better specimens of the engraver's skill. The $100 counterfeiters now in circulation are so perfect that many experts have been deceived by them, and they have floated so adroitly that the Secret Service officers have not been able to obtain the slightest clue. Congress will be asked to authorize a new issue.

The Democrats apologize for the nomination of English by stating that they have resurrected him simply for the purpose of burying him again by electing him Vice President.

After nominating a Union soldier for President, the Cincinnati convention proceeded to nominate one of the most notorious copperheads of war times for Vice President—Wm. H. English, of Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Flood and Miss Jennie Flood will return to San Francisco the first week in July. The marriage of Miss Flood with Ulysses Grant, Jr., of which there has been so much talk, rumor says is to take place about the middle of next November.

The New York Times says epigrammatically: It is a peculiar constituted party which sends rebel brigadiers to Congress because of their rebellion, and which nominates a Union general as its candidate for President of the United States because of his loyalty.

The Democratic papers of the State are publishing fine notices of Gov. English, of Connecticut, under the belief that he is the nominee for Vice President. They will soon change the given name and the name of the State, and run the notices over again.

The Northern Belle mine shipped $6,576 49 on June 20th, making a total for the month to date of $52,060 41. For some time past one of the Northern Belle mills has been shut down for repairs. The bullion product of the mine this month will be smaller in consequence.

General Grant, like all other candidates before the Chicago Convention, acquiesces cordially in the nomination of General Garfield. In an interview in Milwaukee, published in the Sentinel of that city, he remarked that "Garfield was a good man," and one who "has always been right." General Rawley says in the same paper that when the dispatch reached Galena announcing the result of the balloting, Grant turned to those standing near and said: "Gentlemen, they have nominated a candidate that we can all support."

CINCINNATI NOMINEE.

The Cincinnati Convention in the nomination of Gen. Hancock puts at rest all speculation as to the course the Democratic managers intend to pursue in the coming canvass. They are aware of the fact that they have suffered from the charge of being a party of States' rights and disunion, and whose policy in opposition has been to weaken the power of the General Government and to augment that of the States. They have never concealed, when concealment would seem to have been the wiser course, their designs in harassing the Government in its execution of laws in support of the national authority, when they seemed to conflict with the alleged rights of the States. Its course in the present and preceding Congresses has been such as to revive the recollection of the bitter and uncompromising disputes as to the nature of the government that preceded and it was hoped had terminated in the civil war. Conscious of the disapproval of their course in Congress by the people of the North, they hope in the nomination of Hancock to remove the stigma of disloyalty that is inextricably attached to the Democratic name, and by the support of him whose service in behalf of the Government, though neither brilliant nor important, were sincere, to regain enough of the loyal vote of the North to ensure their support in November.

The unquestioned ability of General Garfield, and his undoubted strength before the country made it necessary for the Democrats to turn aside from those of their leaders who are tainted with the prevailing Democratic sentiment and select for a standard bearer one whose career, by reason of its obscurity, is not subject to the assaults that are so easily provoked by a prominent public record. The issue now fairly made is the old one of national supremacy against State sovereignty, and with earnest, faithful work upon the part of Republicans there need be no fears as to the result. There will be loud assertions as to the issues that involved us in a civil war and loaded us with a debt of millions of dollars, and the far higher debt of gratitude to those who bore the perils and sufferings of the war, were settled by that unhappy conflict. But the record of their candidate for the Presidency will deceive no one as to the aims of the Democratic party. Their public record and utterances are the means by which they are to be judged, and they are of a character that will deceive no one.

HANCOCK AND ENGLISH.

We are well pleased with the nomination of Hancock by the Democrats. He is a first-class man; a Union soldier; a man of force and executive ability, and if he should be chosen President, would probably be a safe man for the country. The great fear is that he will be run by the managers of his party, in which case the tail of the ticket might as well have been put at the head at once. And the record of the party is so bad that it will not do to take chances on anybody. We are not surprised at the evidences of further stultification; they have always cried against a military man at the head of affairs, and yet now nominate a Union General; the South apparently swallows the dose, and yet at heart it makes them sick, they show a disposition to sacrifice everything in hopes of eventually being the winner. The situation is a clever one all around. The contrast between Hancock and English is so striking, that sensible people should see more plainly than ever the necessity of electing Garfield and Arthur. English is a dyed-in-the-wool copperhead—a regular F. F. V. in the fullest acceptance of the term as understood by the Democracy.

Condition of the Bank of California.

The Bank Commissioners have just concluded an examination of the affairs of the Bank of California and report its condition as follows: Assets—Banking house and lot, $250,000; other real estate, $957,688 37; loans on real estate, $311,452 15; invested in stocks and bonds, $151,358 36; loans on stocks and bonds, $1,553,747 11; loans on personal security, $2,728,633 57; loans on other securities, $893,294 65; money on hand, $4,561,244 05; deposits in other banks, $269,667 92; silver bars, U. S. M., $139,280 94; other assets, $47,930 11; Virginia City agency, $265,233 65; Gold Hill agency, $66,510 47; New York, $1,639,786 16. Total, $13,835,807 51. Liabilities—Capital paid up, $3,900,000; surplus reserve, $1,393,590 91; due depositors, $9,341,042 18; due banks and bankers, $90,081 72; other liabilities, $11,092 70. Total, $13,835,807 51.

"HARBINGER OF PEACE."

Mr. Garfield's name will harmonize all factions, conciliate all interests, satisfy all sections of the country and prove a harbinger of peace and a talisman of victory. Of all the candidates, either prominent or incidentally mentioned, the name of Garfield is the best that could be selected and will bring out the united, hearty and zealous support of all Republicans and draw largely on the Democratic ranks.

THE BLUE-JAY STORY.

As Told in Mark Twain's "Tramp Abroad."

"When I first began to understand jay language correctly, there was a little incident happened here. Seven years ago, the last man in this region but me moved away. There stands his house—been empty ever since; a log house with a plank roof—just one big room and no more; no ceiling—nothing between the rafters and the floor. Well, one Sunday morning I was sitting out here in front of my cabin, with my cat, taking the sun and looking at the blue hills, and listening to the leaves rustling so lonely in the trees, and thinking of the home away yonder in the States, that I hadn't heard from in 13 years, when a blue-jay lit on that house, with an acorn in his mouth, and says, 'Hello, I reckon I've struck something.' When he spoke, the acorn dropped out of the mouth and rolled down the roof, or course, but he didn't care; his mind was all on the thing he had struck. It was a knot-hole in the roof. He cocked his head to one side, 'shut one eye and put the other one to the hole, like a possum looking down a jug; then he glanced up with his bright eyes, gave a wink or two with his wings—which signifies gratification, you understand—and says, 'It looks like a hole, it's located like a hole—blamed me if I don't believe it is a hole!'"

"Then he cocked his head down and took another look; he glanced up perfectly joyful, this time; winks his wings and his tail both, and says, 'O, no, this ain't no fit thing, I reckon! I ain't in luck—why it's a perfectly elegant hole.' So he flew down and gits that acorn, and fetched it up and dropped it in and was just tilting his head back, with the heavenliest smile on his face, when all of a sudden he was paralyzed into a listening attitude and that smile faded gradually out of his countenance like breath off'n a razor, and the queerest look of surprise took its place. Then he says, 'Why I didn't hear it fall!' He cocked his eye at the hole again, and took a long look; raised up and shook his head; stepped around to the other side of the hole and took another look from that side; shook his head again. He studied a while, then he just went into the details—walked round and round the hole and spied into it from every point of the compass. No use. Now he took a thinking attitude on the comb of the roof and scratched the back of his head with his right foot a minute and finally says: 'Well, it's too much for me, that's certain; must be a mighty long hole; anyhow I ain't got no time to fool around here, I got to 'tend to business; I reckon it's all right—chance it, anyway.'"

"So he flew off and fetched another acorn and dropped it in, and tried to fix his eye to the hole quick enough to see what become of it, but he was too late. He held his eye there as much as a minute; then he raised up and sighed, and says, 'Confound it, I don't seem to understand this thing, no way; however I'll tackle her again.' He fetched another acorn, and done his level best to see what become of it, but he couldn't. He says, 'Well, I never struck such a hole as this, before; I'm of the opinion that it's a totally new kind of a hole.' Then he began to get mad. He held in for a spell, walking up and down the comb of the roof and shaking his head and muttering to himself; but his feelings got the upper hand of him, presently, and he broke loose and cursed himself black in the face. I never see a bird take on so about a little thing. When he got through he walks to the hole and looks in again for half a minute; then he says, 'Well, you are a long hole, and a deep hole, and a mighty singular hole altogether—but I've started in to fill you, and I'm d—d if I don't fill you, if it takes a hundred years!'"

"And with that, away he went. You never see a bird work so since you was born. He laid into his work like a nigger, and the way he hove acorns into that hole for about two hours and a half was one of the most exciting and astonishing spectacles I ever struck. He never stopped to take a look any more—he just hove 'em in and went for more. Well, at last he could hardly flop his wings, he was so tuckered out. He comes a-drooping down, once more, sweating like an ice-pitcher, drops his acorn in and says, 'Now I guess I've got the bulge on you by this time!' So he bent down for a look. If you'll believe me, when his head come up again he was just pale with rage. He says, 'I've shoveled acorns enough in there to keep the family 30 years, and if I can see a sign of one of 'em, I wish I may land in a museum with my belly full of saw-dust in two minutes.'"

"He just had strength enough to crawl up on to the comb and lean his back agin the chimney, and then he collected his impressions and begun to free his mind. I see in a second that what I had mistook for profanity in the mine) was only just the rudiments, as you may say. "Another jay was going by and heard him doing his devotions, and stops to inquire what was up. The sufferer told him the whole circumstance, and says, 'Now, yonder's the hole, and if you don't believe me, go and look for yourself.' So this fellow went and looked, and comes back and says, 'How many did you say you put in there?' 'Not any less than two tons,' said the sufferer. The other jay went and looked again. He couldn't seem to make it out, so he raised a yell, and three more jays come. They all examined the hole; they all made the sufferer tell it over again, then they all discussed it, and got off as many leather-headed opinions about it as an average crowd of humans could have done.

"They called in more jays; then more and more, till pretty soon this whole region 'peared to have a blue flash about it. There must have been 5,000 of them; and such another jarring and disputing and ripping and cussing, you never heard. Every jay in the whole lot put his eye to the hole and delivered a more chuckle-headed opinion about the mystery than the jay that went there before him. They examined the house all over, too. The door was standing half open, and at last one old jay happened to go and light on it and look in. Of course, that knocked the mystery galley-west in a second. There lay the acorns, scattered all over the floor. He flopped his wings and raised a whoop, 'Come here!' he says, 'Come here, everybody; hang'd if the fool hasn't been trying to fill up a house with acorns!' They all came a-swooping down like a blue cloud, and as each fellow lit on the door and took a glance, the whole absurdity of the contract that that first jay had tackled him home, and he fell over backward, suffocating with laughter; and the next jay took his place and done the same. "Well, sir, they roosted around here on the house-top and trees for an hour, and guffawed over that thing like human beings. It ain't any use to tell me a blue-jay hasn't got a sense of humor, because I know better. And memory, too. They brought jays here from all over the United States to look down that hole, every Summer for three years. Other birds, too. And they could all see the point, the Yosemite, and he took this thing in on his way back. He said he couldn't see anything funny in it. But then he was a good deal disappointed about Yosemite, too."

The Republicans of Wisconsin celebrated what they called The Silver Wedding of the Republican party of that State, on the 24th day of July, 1879, at Madison, the capital of the State. It was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the formation of the party in Wisconsin. General Garfield was present and made a speech, in the course of which he uttered the following and stirring and patriotic words, expressive of his attitude on the issues of the war.

"We have not sought to revive the dead issues of the war. For one, I would be glad if all the bitterness of that strife should rest under the green graves of our dead. If we could imitate the peace of God and close our difficulties as the graves were closed over our battle-fields of blood, I, for one, would be satisfied. But, fellow citizens, anxious as I am for one, ready as I am for one, to join in friendship with every American under the flag, North and South, there is just one term of agreement on which I can stand, and only one. It must be this: I will join hands with no man who does not admit that the war for the Union was right, everlastingly and forever right. And that the war against the Union was wrong—was a crime, was treason, was all that deserved the thunders of war and the punishment of death. The man who is willing to admit the eternal wrongfulness of that war and its cause, and the eternal rightfulness of ours, is my brother from this day forward and forever; but on no other ground will I greet him or acknowledge him. If one truth blazed out of the fire of our war, more clear than another, it was this, that this is a powerful nation, a mighty nation, that carries its emblems proudly forward on sea and on land; that it has power that strike every man, every woman, every child, every Territory, every State, that dare stand in its war, it will strike them until they are obedient to the law."

A queer freak of fashion is to lace up dresses with silk lacing strings and leave the tags hang as ornaments.

Savings Bank Matters.

Although the Trustees of the Savings Bank were in session yesterday nothing definite was done, except to make a partial examination of the balance sheet. Another meeting will be held to-morrow, when it will be determined what is best for the benefit of the creditors.

Fireman's Ball.

The 48s and 1s will give a grand ball at the Pavilion on the evening of the 5th of July. Elaborate preparations are being made to make it the dance of dances. The fire boys deserve a hearty support, for the money raised will be expended to make their appliances for fighting fire better. Every body should buy tickets, which are sold for $2 each. See the adv.

Will Not Celebrate.

The 4th of July Finance Committee did not meet with the success they had anticipated, and it has been deemed advisable that no attempt be made to celebrate this year. So the matter has been dropped.

Temperance Lecture.

Edward Carswell one of the most popular temperance lecturers of the day, will lecture at Reform Club Hall Monday evening, June 28th. Admission free.

Considerable interest is manifested in the base ball game to be played in Hatch's field this afternoon. Those four professionals will doubtless draw a crowd of spectators.

RATIFYING.

The Democratic Meeting Last Night.

The Democrats held a large and enthusiastic meeting on the Merchants' Exchange corner last night. The meeting was called to order by Roger Johnson, who with a few well timed remarks, nominated H. B. Cossitt as President of the meeting. Mr. Cossitt, on taking the Chair, paved the way for the enthusiasm that subsequently pervaded the whole meeting. He first introduced G. A. Rankin, whose eloquent remarks kept the audience spell-bound for some fifteen or twenty minutes creating an enthusiasm that did not waver during the evening.

Judge Haydon was the next speaker, and in his well-known earnest remarks, gave telling and forcible reasons why not only the Democrats, but all good citizens had reason to congratulate themselves on the nominees of the Democracy.

Bob Lowery, of Virginia, next took the stand, and his forcible, sensible manner of showing why the Democrats would win in the next election was well received. His humorous solution of the 7 to 8 problem was greeted with loud cheers.

Dr. Collier, of Sacramento, was next introduced and in a masterly argumentative speech of one-half hour enchaind the attention of the large audience, often interrupted by loud cheering. The doctor's remarks were well-timed and only lacked time to have made for the opening of the campaign an avenue for younger orators to tread.

Mr. Knox and Mr. Chas. Queen made short and effective speeches, and with three rousing cheers for the nominees the meeting dispersed.

Reform Club.

Although the ratification meeting drew away many, there was still a goodly number at the Reform Club entertainment. After the opening chorus Alfred Holladay recited a poem of Belshazzar and the handwriting on the wall. "Where is Minnie Gone" was the title of Minnie McKenzie's song. Little Louisa Mathews recited some baby verses with the good text of "Charity." Mrs. Geo. Cutting sang the beautiful ballad, "Memories of Twilight." The young ladies present received good advice from Elsie Mathews, who begged of them all not to marry "a man who drinks." "Come in and Shut the Gate," was the solo given by Miss C. L. Jones. Miss Fannie Rusack gave a solo in her usual pleasant style. Piano accompaniment by Miss Wintermantel. Mr. Leete gave his hearers an interesting account of his late trip to Colorado. He described the cities of Denver and Leadville, and spoke in detail of the many processes through which the ore passes in the Denver and Colorado Smelting Works.

Tilden and the Census Enumerator.

A census enumerator called at a handsome house, No. — Gramercy Park, the other day, and officially accosted the elderly gentleman who lives there. The following conversation ensued:

"What is your name?"
"Samuel J. Tilden. On the whole, I do not think that I have anything to communicate on the subject."

"Where is your home?"
"In the White House, but I was cheated—I beg your pardon, I live here now."

"What is your occupation?"
"I am a can—Ahem; you has better see Mr. Faulkner about that."

"What is your age?"
"I am one with a hundred ciphers; you can figure it out for yourself."

"Are you married?"
"Now, really, as to that you must see Mr. Watterson."

"Have you any family?"
"I cannot undertake to answer any questions of that kind. I am in the hands of my friends, and from them you can obtain any proper information."

And the door closed.—[Cleveland Herald.]

The Comstock.

[Enterprise 26th.]

The stock market is still dull and the prices of all stocks very low. We cannot see that there is anything liable to occur before the 4th of next month to either cause an advance in prices or give increased activity to the market. Directly after the Fourth, however, we look to see the stock business much better—better prices and a livelier market. There will then be a very good trading market, which may culminate in a Fall boom some time in September or October.

Our reasons for the above conclusions are that the big pump at the 2500 level of the Union shaft will start up between the 1st and 4th of next month, and this will be immediately followed by work on the 2500 and 2400 levels of the Union Consolidated and Sierra Nevada mines that will give new interest to the situation at the north end and command the attention of dealers in stocks.

Drunken men are quite common on our streets of late—a sufficient proof that times are improving.—Truckee Republican.

This explains why nobody can sleep in Reno when times are really good in Truckee.—Virginia Chronicle.

A Philadelphia youth, who committed suicide twenty years ago because a lovely being gave him the mitten, has been heard from through an up-town medium. He says he gazes through the misty veil which divides life and death, and sees his old flame now with her fourteen children lying around loose, while she cleans house; he gets mad enough at his folly to commit suicide again, and his greatest punishment is in the reflection that he can't.
